

Amber Museum

Russia's only amber museum is located in the defensive tower "Der Dona" in Kaliningrad. The museum exhibition occupies 28 halls with a total area of more than one thousand square meters. A significant part of the collection consists of amber pieces with inclusions of fragments of ancient flora and fauna.

Königsberg Cathedral

Königsberg Cathedral is a Brick Gothic-style cathedral in Kaliningrad on an island in the Pregel. The island was called Kneiphof in German times. Today, the cathedral has two chapels, one Lutheran, the other Russian Orthodox, as well as a museum. The cathedral is also used for concerts. The tomb of the philosopher Immanuel Kant is today in a mausoleum adjoining the northeast corner of the cathedral.

King's Gate

The King's Gate is one of the former six gates that were built during the 19th century around Kaliningrad. The gate was damaged during the Second World War. In June 2005, the gate was renovated. Inside, the gate houses the Grand Embassy, a permanent 3-room exhibition which is a department of the Museum of the World Ocean and is dedicated, rather unsurprisingly, to the diplomatic mission of Russia's Peter the Great to Königsberg in 1697.

Museum of the World Ocean

The Museum of the World Ocean was established by order of the RSFSR Government on April 12, 1990.

According to regulations, the Museum of the World Ocean is a Republican Centre for scientific research and methodological work and it is devoted to the history of exploration and development of the World Ocean.

Welcome to Kaliningrad

Kaliningrad also known as Königsberg dates back to the 13th century, when it was under the rule of the Teutonic knights, an order of German knights. That time the city was the capital of Prussia. Destroyed in World War II and annexed to the USSR in 1945, the region was stripped of its German identity and was named after Mikhail Kalinin.

Now it's the most Western Russian city with lots of historical sights and museums.
