There are two types of animals that we know: domestic and wild. While domestic animals live near people, wild animals can be found in the wild.

Their habitats include the forests, the jungles, the deserts, the mountains, etc. Some of my favourite wild animals are bears, tigers and elephants. In my opinion, modern society treats them badly.

People believe that wild animals are of no use and they simply waste our precious resources. I strongly disagree and I think that wild animals need to be protected and preserved as any other life on our planet.

Unfortunately, they are often impacted by deliberate actions or neglect.
Hunting for valuable parts of these animals is the most common problem.

For example, many elephants are killed for their tusks, foxes are killed for their fur, wolves are killed for their fangs, sharks are killed for their liver oil. To think only, people can be so cruel to nature.

As a result, the increasing human-wildlife conflict leads to unwanted problems. For example, sharks are natural guards of the ocean.

They keep their habitat clean. So, getting rid of sharks, people destroy the underwater flora and fauna

It becomes obvious that wild animals are the part of our ecosystem. Every species is rather important to keep the balance of life on Earth. Other than that, wild animals have an aesthetic appeal.

Some animals are such beautiful creatures, for example, the black panthers or leopards. In conclusion We'd like to add that wildlife should be preserved and well-treated if people want to avoid certain ecological problems.

Thank you!
